SOCIETY has neither circles, triangles nor squares at this writing, at the capital unless in the vicinities of the city. The game is all played out here and it behooves the girl and the place to match up perfectly elsewhere if the social careers are to be continued while the mercurial stars in the firmament and our West End cronies have resumed their summer stillness. The President's action in delaying a little vacation with his family keeps Washington on the map officially and has postponed a good many trips for less notable individuals. Mrs. Marshall, Mrs. Bryan, Mrs. Lane and Miss Agnes Wilson have no intention of deserting the heads of their households until Congress adjourns, and Mrs. Daniels will accompany the Secretary of the Navy when he leaves the capital on official journeys.

Washingtonians are already being heard from on both sides of the water, several being in London for the Poincaré visit and the great race days, and one family, that of Rear Admiral Coker, enjoying the Asot race meeting in the royal inclosure. No small pleasure that at the outset of an extended European tour. At other capitals and various spas abroad Washington names are mentioned in press dispatches of the gay doings, while at Newport, Bar Harbor and other resorts our diplomatic winter residents are busy participants in the easy pace marking the early season. Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish will corral them all on the Fourth of July at a luncheon, and several large dinners of that date are to have dance finishes. The Bakmetoffs, the Rianos and members of the German embassy staff are already settled at Newport for the summer.

European departures are quite up to the average in numbers this year from this city and are nearly all those of experienced travelers who are branching out into new territory if they can possibly find it, or, at least, will try to keep out of beaten tracks. Seemingly there are few whose destination was the London season or events of corresponding eclat, and so far as mentioned the representations of American women, especially of this city, have been very few this year.

Engagements.

Mrs. George Choate Kendall announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Kendall, to Mr. Robert Keeney of Hartford, Conn. The marriage will take place in September.

Mrs. David Rumbaugh, widow of Col. Rumbaugh, U. S. A., announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Anna Rumbaugh, to Lieut. William V. West, U. S. A. Lieut. West, who has just been ordered to Texas on special duty, has been stationed at Fort Riley, Kan., where Miss Rumbaugh has recently been the guest of her brother, Capt. Stanley M. Rumbaugh, U. S. A.

Mr. and Mrs. John D. Parker announce the engagement of their daughter, Ethel Mary, to Mr. Parker and Mr. Raymond E. Horn, assistant chief of the bureau of investigation, Department of Justice.

The wedding will take place in the fall. Among the interesting announcements of class day at Harvard was that of the engagement of Miss Frances Saltonstall and George von L. Meyer, Jr. Miss Saltonstall is the youngest of the three daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Philip L. Saltonstall. She is tall, slender and attractive, and Mr. Meyer has been devoted to her since her debutante season, a year ago last winter. The spring after her debut she took a leading part in the Vincent club's "Mildred From Dublin" and made a big hit with her singing and graceful dancing. Miss Saltonstall has visited the Meyers in this city. Her sisters are Miss Rose Saltonstall and Mrs. Philip Ralph Weld (Katharine Saltonstall), a bride of last November. Miss Saltonstall, in white muslin and lace with a pale blue girle and a large black tulle hat, looked very pretty in acknowledging the compliments paid her. Her mother, Mrs. Philip L. Saltonstall, wore white chiffon and lace with touches of black velvet and a black plumed hat. Mrs. Meyer, who was also one of her son's party, was in black satin and chiffon with touches of white and a close black hat, and Miss Julia Meyer wore pale blue and white foulard with white lace and a black and white hat. Miss Rose Saltonstall, the other sister of the fiancée, was in white broadcloth satin with coatee of pink satin and a pale blue girle and a black hat.

That Something Old.

Every bride likes to wear something old, which is at the same time lovely or rare, on her wedding day. Laces, jewels and tulle veils are most frequently available, but a recent bride wore her grandmother's shippers, which had soft soles and square toes. They had to be strapped on with ribbons. Another bride wore her grandmother's silk stockings, which her own mother wore, too, on her wedding day. An entire trousseau prepared over three score years ago was recently given to another bride by her adopted mother, who had expected to wear them herself in her romance-making days. But the bridegroom to be died and the lovely garments, some finished and others only then, were laid away. The thread lace wedding dress was in the chest with the other finery, which is now seeing daylight, made up and worn in a modish way by the lovely young bride of June.

W. C. T. U. Fete.

Arrangements for the lawn fete to be given by the Women's Christian Temperance Union of the District of Columbia on the evenings of June 30 and July 1, the purpose of which is to raise funds for the preservation of Belmont as a park, have been practically completed. The grounds have been wired so that the illumination will be by electricity, which affords more opportunity for beautiful effects than when it is necessary to use Japanese lanterns, and a section of the music of the Ben Hur furnish the music. The reception committee is composed of Mrs. Emma Sanford Shelton, Mrs. William E. Andrews, Mrs. W. J. Cawthon and Mrs. J. A. Edgar.

The program committee consists of Mrs. Emma Sanford Shelton, Mrs. William E. Andrews, Mrs. W. J. Cawthon and Mrs. J. A. Edgar. Mrs. J. A. Edgar and Mrs. Lindley P. Clark; electric lights, Mrs. W. E. Andrews; lanterns, Mrs. Edgar; printing, Mrs. J. A. Edgar and Miss Lucy Patrick; lemonade, Mrs. Mary C. Hazen; Irene V. Hanes, Mrs. Howard and Mrs. Emma Randolph; decorations, Mrs. Mary C. Copeland and Mrs. Nellie H. Bradley; flowers, Miss Eleanor Walker.

In Congressional Circles.

Representative and Mrs. Ben Johnston will move this week to their newly purchased home, 1620 S street.

Mrs. Richard W. Austin and Miss Jane Austin, the wife and daughter of Representative Austin, do not expect to leave town until the adjournment of Congress. Senator Joseph F. Johnston and Mrs. Johnston have given up their apartment at the Cochrane and have gone to the Brighton, where they will remain until Congress adjourns.

Representative and Mrs. Oscar Callaway of Texas have with them for an indefinite stay at their home on Capitol Hill Representative Callaway's young brother, who has arrived from his home in Texas.

A Lawn Festival.

Friday evening at 8 o'clock the young people of Bethany Baptist Church held a lawn festival at the home of Miss Mary Windsor, 143 S street northwest, in honor of Miss Mary Blake, who is soon to return to her home at Shawnee, Okla. After a year's visit in this city. The whole affair was a complete surprise. Miss Blake was presented with a beautiful gold bracelet from her numerous Bethany friends.

After a pleasant time, taken up with youthful pastimes, refreshments were served. Those present were Misses Elizabeth Harris, Pearl Hopper, Olive Johnson, Geneva Dillon, Reba Thompson, Ruth Carter, Hannah Scott, Eloise Kerriek, Elsie Connelley, Mary Blake, Mary Windsor, and Messrs. Walter Fortin, Chester Hopper, Wallace Perry, George Golden, Perry Stevenson, Everett Haycraft, Richard Barr and Homer Counselor.

AT HER OWN FIRESIDE

MRS. ORENSBY McCAW-MON.
A Chevy Chase hostess.

At the Resorts.

The awning over the broad veranda around the James J. Van Alen villa, Wakehurst, at Newport, is said to be probably the coolest in the world. It is sixty feet long and twenty-two feet wide, and is described as a marvelous creation of applique on cotton fabric. The side sections are of gray linen, which go to Bar Harbor, where she is expected to arrive on the 10th. The colors are oriental and consist of reds, yellows, blues, greens and white. Over the vast inclosure is strung outer, winter and summer. Their freight included several automobiles, one a racer, and a big string of show horses. They were accompanied by a retinue of servants, which includes those who are to look after baby McLean. Master McLean will have junior society in Master William Henry Vanderbilt, son of Mrs. Elsie French Vanderbilt, and little Miss Katharine Vanderbilt, the daughter of Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt of Sandy Point farm.

Mrs. Thomas F. Walsh will spend a few weeks at Narragansett Pier before going to Bar Harbor, where she is expected the middle of July. She will have official and other guests throughout the summer. Mrs. Hunt Slater and Mrs. John B. Henderson, the latter after her European trip, will also be at Bar Harbor this year. Mrs. Harriet Blaine Beale made a short visit there last week prior to sailing for Europe.

A Pretty Reception.

Lieut. and Mrs. Raymond G. Payne entertained at a handsomely appointed reception Saturday night last at Fort Stevens, Ga. The house was beautifully decorated with palms and southern smilax, and the post band played throughout the evening. Mrs. Payne and Miss Payne assisted in the dining room, where the table decorations were in red and white. Mrs. Payne's gown was white, charming, with lace drapery. Her house guest, Miss Gailen of Washington, D. C., wore pink chiffon over white. In the guest list were included Col. and Mrs. Walker, Capt. and Mrs. Wylie, Capt. and Mrs. Hopkins, Miss Coombs of Georgia, Miss Donnelly of New York, Dr. and Mrs. McCord, Lieut. McGuyer, Chaplain, Chaplain and Mrs. Braisted and Capt. and Mrs. Thomas.

In Foreign Cities.

Mrs. Marshall Field and Mrs. C. C. Cuyler have arrived in Paris. They expect to spend the summer at Aix-les-Bains, with occasional motor trips through northern Italy.

Rear Admiral Raymond P. Rodgers and family recently made a short stay in Paris, en route to London.

Mr. Duncan Phillips and Mr. John H. Phillips of this city were recent visitors in Paris.

One of the most important social events of the season in London was the dinner and reception given by Capt. and Mrs. Frederick Guest in honor of the prime minister and Mrs. Asquith at their villa.

The construction of this house is very remarkable. The whole of the ground floor is given up to reception rooms arranged around the winter garden, which is the chief feature of the house. Here every conceivable kind of fern flourish, and the rockery walls are perpetually irrigated by trickling fountains. A staircase concealed in the rocks leads to the second floor, the rooms of which look on to this magnificent garden.

A band played for the dancing in the ballroom, where a wonderful floral decoration of roses and lilies festooned the walls, and tall jardinières filled with orchids and roses were placed around the room.

A company numbered 600, and included members of the cabinet and parliament, diplomats and other guests. The hostess, who was Miss Phelps of Pittsburgh before her marriage, received in a robe of blue and gold brocade, with mauve embroidery. She wore a broad tiara of diamonds and emeralds, while diamond stars and clusters sparkled on her corsage.

Col. and Mrs. Robert M. Thompson, Miss Beresford and Miss Phyllis of Aix-les-Bains.

One of the prettiest of the church weddings this season in London was that of Sir Alexander Napier and Miss Joan A. Morris.

The bride wore a lovely gown of white tulle, draped with old point de lace here, the long court train being composed entirely of this lace. The eight bridesmaids wore dresses of pale pink tulle, with tulle of rose-embroidered chiffon and high folded ruffles of wadded blue satin. The same shade of blue ribbon adorned their pink chiffon hats.

Seven bridesmaids were in attendance at the marriage of Mrs. Sten-Dury and Mr.

Philipsborn

Ten-one F St. Rich's Corner Tenth.

Francis Graham Arnold, wearing early Victorian costumes of white satin and frilled net, with black velvet sashes and white straw hats.

The bride wore white tulle and old Limerick lace, with a court train of brocade and tulle.

A beautiful gown was worn by Lady Mary Dawson, whose marriage to Maj. the Hon. George Crichton took place in London last week.

The foundation was wavy brocade, with the corsage composed entirely of hand-embroidered chiffon. Her long court train of silver tissue was draped with Brussels lace.

Another fashionable bride in London wore an elaborate robe of white satin with embroideries in diamonds, and silver boules formed the entire front panel and outlined the edge of her court train.

Many beautiful and unusual gowns were worn the opening day at Ascot. King George and Queen Mary entertained a party in the royal box, later having a luncheon of forty guests, at which Mr. Page, the new American ambassador to England, was present. The queen wore a gown of hyacinth blue satin embroidered in the same color, with a blue hat trimmed with plumes.

The Crown Princess of Sweden and Princess Patricia were present, the former wearing a dress of maize crepe, with a collar of futed lace, and a hat trimmed with roses, while the latter wore a simple white muslin dress, with a black belt and a black sailor hat with white plumes.

White and black seemed to be the predominating colors, dresses of white satin and lace and black tulle being especially popular.

The Duchess of Portland wore a beautiful gown of white satin veiled in black net, with a touch of cherry satin on the bodice, and Lady Crew wore black tulle draped with cream-tinted lace.

The most-talked-of gown of the day was one with the new wired tulle in the Persian style.

This was formed of black material standing out stiffly at the knees, with a fringe of silk cherries and leaves falling from the wired edge. Beneath this was an extraordinarily close-fitting skirt of black satin.
